Matthew Tsun focuses his practice on representing individuals who have been injured by the carelessness of others. He has extensive experience handling complex cases with serious injuries to his clients. Many of his cases have involved hotly contested issues on liability and damages, and so Matt brings a wealth of knowledge and creative solutions to all of his clients. He is intimately familiar with all phases of personal injury cases, both pre-litigation and in litigation, and advocates aggressively for his clients.

Prior to joining Blankingship & Keith, Matt practiced with a personal injury firm in Washington, DC where he obtained successful results for over 500 clients.

In law school, Matt was heavily involved with the Emory University School of Law Moot Court Society. He was selected to compete in both the American Bar Association National Appellate Advocacy Competition and the New York City Bar National Moot Court Competition. For his excellence in oral advocacy, Matt was selected to the Order of the Barristers.
